A GREENER FUTURE

Nestled in the picturesque calm of leafy Edgbaston – but just minutes from the bustling city centre – is one of Birmingham’s best hotels. Now Edgbaston Park Hotel is aiming to be one of the city’s greenest hospitality businesses too.

Who we are

Opened by University of Birmingham in 2018, Edgbaston Park Hotel consists of one contemporary hotel building and two historic houses: Hornton Grange and Grade II-listed Garth House.

It boasts 185 bedrooms and three serviced apartments, the stunning 1900 Restaurant, Bar and Terrace, plus events facilities for up to 250 people.

Edgbaston Park Hotel sits outside the clean air zone, an easy walking distance from University of Birmingham train station, and there is complimentary car parking.

Changing for future generations

We know the tourism industry isn’t always good for our planet. We’re committed to playing our part for future generations by changing how we operate.

We’re currently working with Green Tourism to achieve a Gold Award, by minimising waste and using sustainable resources.

CEO Richard Metcalfe says: ‘We are committed to doing everything in our power to protect and sustain our local, natural and global environment for future generations.’
